What is a namespace used for in XML configuration?

An XML namespace is just a token that, for lack of a better description, identifies whose "version" a particular tag or attribute is.

The idea is to prevent conflicts if, for instance, you're using XML with elements defined by multiple people/programs/standards bodies/etc.